YOUR EXAM

DURATION: 25-30 minutes

Pelvis, kidney, or bladder ultrasounds use high frequency sound waves transmitted through a transducer (probe) to visualize and assess your kidneys, ureters (small muscular tubes that join the kidneys with the bladder), urinary bladder, reproductive organs, prostate gland, and the surrounding area, including blood vessels.

Please inform the sonographer performing your exam if you have had surgery related to one of these organs, if you have a history of kidney stones, or if you have stents placed in the ureters or urinary bladder. A pelvis ultrasound can assess the position or presence of an intrauterine contraceptive device (IUD).

WHAT HAPPENS DURING MY EXAM?

- You may be asked to change into a gown.
- A warm, non-scented, hypo-allergenic, water-based ultrasound gel will be applied to the area being scanned.
- Your technologist (sonographer) will ask you to lower or arrange your clothing so that the area of concern is exposed to apply gel and scan the area.
- The sonographer will move the transducer (probe) around the area between your hipbones and below your bellybutton to take images of the organs and bladder.
- The sonographer will ask you to perform various breathing techniques that aid in obtaining the best images of your organs.
- You may be asked to lie on your side, sit, or stand to bring your organs into a better position.
- You may experience mild to moderate pressure while the sonographer takes the images.
- In some cases: An endovaginal ultrasound may be necessary for a more detailed picture. Your sonographer will explain the procedure in detail to make sure you understand and consent to the exam. You will be asked to empty your bladder for this scan and a small probe will be gently inserted into the vagina.
- The radiologist will review the images.
- It is not unusual for the radiologist to come into the scan room after your exam to speak to you about your results. You will then be free to leave.

WHEN WILL I GET MY RESULTS?

We do our best to have our radiologists interpret the information and forward the results to your doctor by the next business day.
